Practice briefings, delivered by the trainees in Mr. [REDACTED] Intelligence Class, are to be photographed under a system devised by AAS. Our technicians are setting up the camera, lights, electrical connections, and preparing a system so that all the instructor has to do is slip several switches and the action will be photographed. This has required extensive and rush preparations by AAS but the results should be worth the effort. When the briefings are over AAS is ready to cut the film into individual segments which will permit each trainee to examine and analyze his delivery as many times as is necessary. Self-critique can thus be performed individually or for the class.

[REDACTED] unique idea to make sound motion picture records of each delivery may well be the forerunner of a similar use for the study of presentations by Case Officers.
